Keith,

Thanks for the conversation today regarding the production of "What's Your Superpower," an intimate look at the lives of children and young adults with Down's Syndrome.

As we discussed, there are few more important pursuits than understanding the challenges faced by our diverse populations and the inspiring stories of success and achievement of those with Down's Syndrome, their families and caregivers.

Detroit PBS is committed to covering issues in the public interest, including those of access and inclusions; exploring the complexities of living with Down's Syndrome, the imperative for care and the simple joys shared with loved ones and professionals who guide them through their daily lives.

We are pleased to include "What is Your Superpower" in our broadcast plans should your development efforts come to fruition. I look forward to speaking with you again soon. In the meantime, I wish you the best of luck in securing support for this latest work.
